

Furlong, Ashleigh

Politico

Ashleigh Furlong is a health care policy reporter at POLITICO Europe with a special focus on global health. She covers the latest health policy developments at EU institutions, national governments and global health organisations. Prior to joining POLITICO, she was a reporter at the science policy publication Research Fortnight where she wrote about biomedical research policy. She has also worked at the British Lung Foundation, writing health information for patients. Before moving to the UK, Ashleigh worked at GroundUp, a South African news agency, where she specialised in reporting on public health, criminal justice and gender.