

Dedeu, Toni

Global and Local Network for Integrated Primary Health Care (Glocalic-Net)

Dr Toni Dedeu is a Senior Expert on Primary Health Care and Integrated Care, recently retired from the WHO, where he was the WHO European Region Senior Advisor for integrated primary health care.

Dr Dedeu is a Medical Doctor specialising in Urology and Family Medicine. He holds three master's degrees (MSc) in Health Economics, Primary and Community Care and Healthcare Management. He has professional experience spanning more than 25 years at the international level in the field of quality assessment, health systems development, primary health care, and integrated care research and implementation. He has held senior positions in health care administration and has worked as a policy maker, manager, researcher, practitioner, and implementer of health system reforms. Dr Dedeu was the Chair of the European Association of Regional and Local Authorities (EUREGHA) and CEO of the International Foundation for Integrated Care (IFIC) based in Oxford, UK. Former Director of the Agency for Health Quality and Assessment of Catalonia, Spain (AQuAS). He has worked on implementing family medicine in several countries. He is a former member of the WONCA Council in his capacity as International Officer of the Spanish Family and Community Medicine Society (SEMFYC). He has been a Family Medicine physician leading multidisciplinary teams and is an advocate of primary health care, integrated care and digital health care. Dr Dedeu has been involved as Principal Investigator and has played other roles in more than forty EU projects within a large diversity of European Commission programmes and initiatives. He is a Scientific and Advisory Board member in several EU projects. Along with his scientific career, he has published more than 100 high-impact research papers in SCI and SCIE journals, and he is a regular lecturer at several universities in Europe, Asia, Canada, and Australia.